

U.S. Army Soldier Systems Center Celebrates Earth Day

The Soldier Systems Center in Natick, Massachusetts celebrated their Army Earth Day on April 20th, 2007. The day's activities were sponsored by the Environmental, Safety & Health Office, and were open to all Soldier Systems Center military and civilian employees and their families. The celebration was in conjunction with the Women in Science & Engineering sponsored "Bring Your Daughters & Sons to Work Day" program during the traditional school vacation week that allow for maximum participation. Each year well over 100 children enjoy the combined activities of these two special events.

Activities included a tree planting ceremony of an Eastern Redbud and educational programs presented by Animal Adventures with live animals. April 16th through the 20th an Earth Day information booth was set up handing out coloring sheets, books, Army Earth Day posters, and information on recycling, energy conservation and other ways to protect the environment.
